He's a bear. She's a wolf. They shouldn't be together, but they can't be apart. Rowan needs some time away from the pressures of being an alpha and a weekend trip to Seattle. He needs to produce his heir, and his mother is convinced he needs to find his mate as soon as possible. At a small dive bar, he meets Holly, a petite, green-eyed force of nature. Holly just happens to be a wolf shifter. She's been dragged to the city by her alpha father to be matched with the son of a neighboring pack's alpha. Against the odds, the Rowan and Holly hit it off, and they come up with a plan. Holly needs to get away from her pack, and Rowan needs a mate. Why not kill two birds with one stone and have Holly go back with Rowan, posing as his mate? It'll work for a while at least. Or that's what they think. Their plan begins to unravel when it turns out they're a lot more than friends. In fact, they've been meant for one another all along, despite the fact that this is unheard of between a wolf and a bear. Will the star-crossed lovers overcome the odds against them?
